Ada Diamonds specializes in large, sensational diamonds of superlative quality. Much like mined diamonds, cultured diamonds are priced based on their quality characteristics.

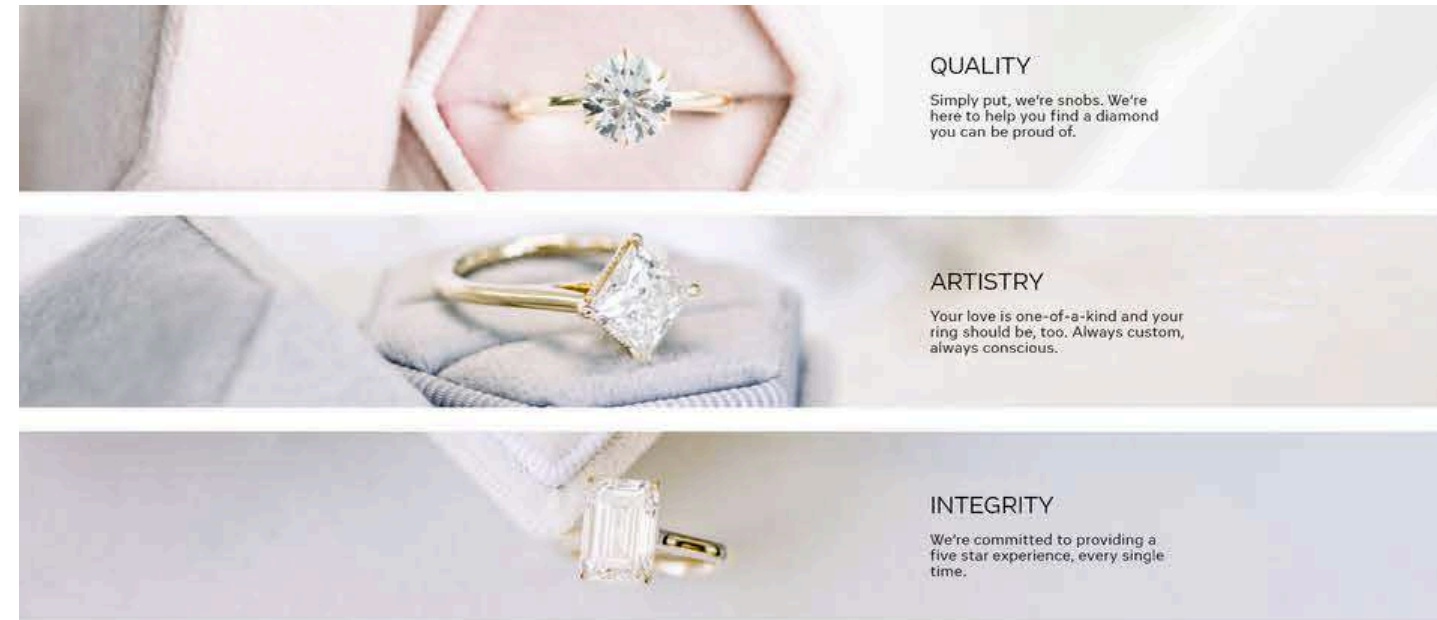

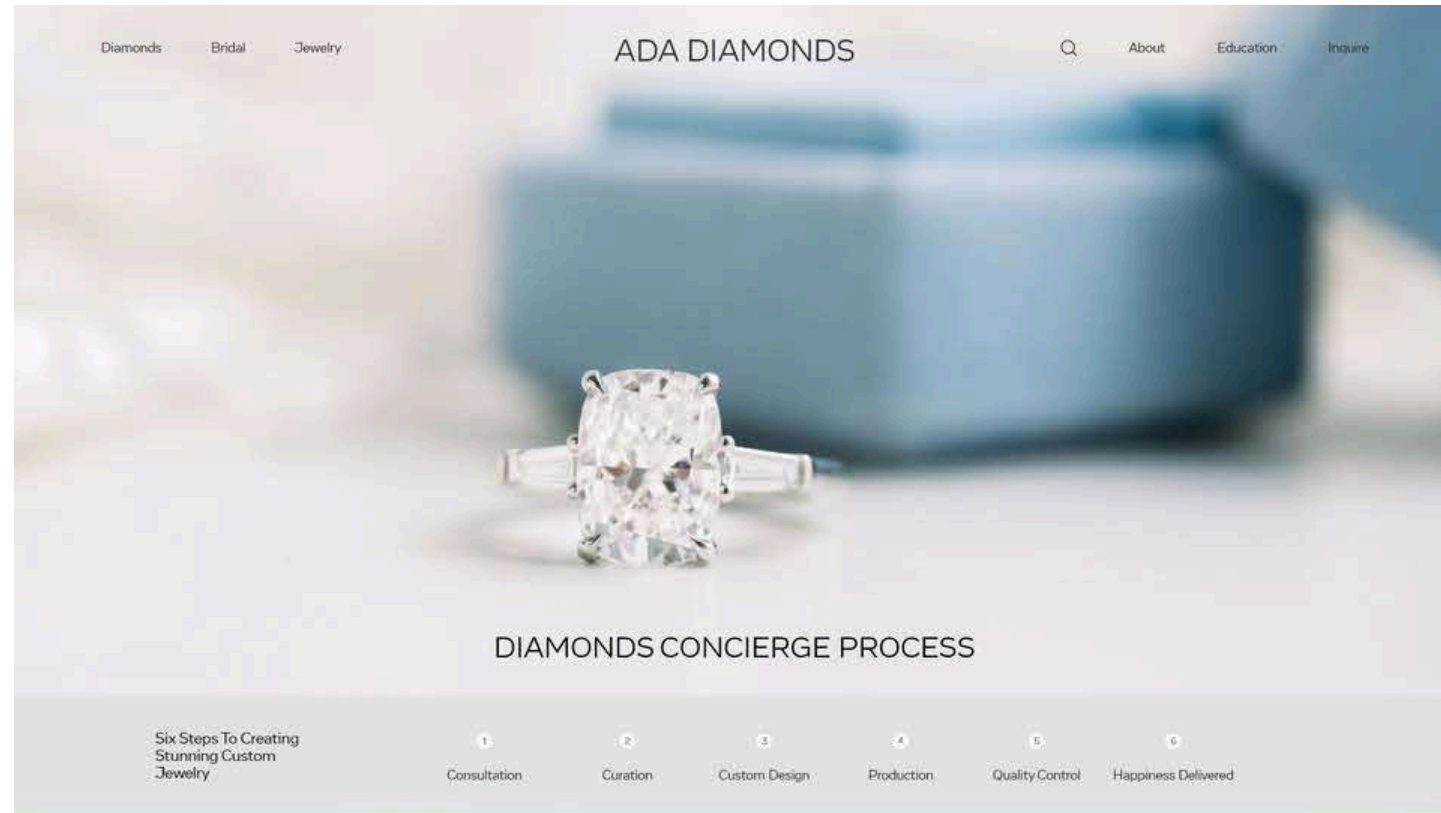

To cater to an increasingly diverse customer base and bring the website up to date, we were tasked to rethink how the current consumer market thinks about spending wisely and how that affects design choices. Based on extensive research, trials, new approaches, and accessibility, we completed the redesign.

CASH FREELY

UI/UX Case Study

ABOUT THE PROJECT

We were asked to design the new feature for the CashFreely app. For the design of the new feature, we reviewed the existing Cash Freely application design to understand the user journey, and different touchpoints and familiarize ourselves with the existing design language, type and colour usage. We also reviewed the competition, how they treated similar features in their applications, what were the advantages and disadvantages of their approach. From the takeaways of the research, we were able to access that keeping the user experience easy and simple will add the most value whilst designing and adding the new feature to the existing Cash Freely Application.

Taking the learnings from our research we set out to develop low and high-resolution wireframes so that we can start mapping out different elements that will form part of the content, customer journey and user experience taking into account all of the feedback previously shared with us.

It has survived not only five centuries, but also the leap into electronic typesetting, remaining essentially unchanged. It was popularised in the 1960s with the release of Letraset sheets containing Lorem Ipsum passages, and more recently with desktop publishing software like Aldus PageMaker including versions of Lorem Ipsum.

Sarah Miller, President, Performance Marketing

Midway through 2023, economic factors like inflation and supply chain issues are still top of mind for consumers and small businesses. Buyers continue to face rising prices and may be rethinking their options if they can't get their preferred brand. From a marketing perspective, working on your brand can help address these challenges, especially if it's been a while since you've made any updates.

Sharpen your brand message

Branding is about your company's overall identity and building a long-term relationship with customers. It's more than just a logo—it's the personality and essence of your business. Your brand captures the why behind what you do, and it's ultimately the reason people buy or work with you.

"Take the time to make sure your brand positioning is hitting the mark. It should capture the value you offer your target customers and what makes you stand out from the competition."

Take the time to make sure your brand positioning is hitting the mark. It should capture the value you offer your target customers and what makes you stand out from the competition.

Market yourself

In addition to inflation and supply chain issues, the labor shortage is another pervasive problem. We're seeing more interest in targeted workforce campaigns to stand out in recruiting. Several clients have invested in recruiting videos. We've also worked with clients to build up the careers section of their websites, and digital ad campaigns have been popular. This is another example of how marketing can be used for more than selling products.

Be easy to find

As a small business, connecting with your customers is crucial. Social media serves as a clear avenue of communication and allows you to be open about shortfalls you're experiencing in staffing, inventory, or pricing. However, the social media landscape is more competitive than ever. That's why skilled social media community management is a must. It's not enough to simply create content—you need to listen, moderate, and respond. Otherwise, you put your brand reputation at risk.

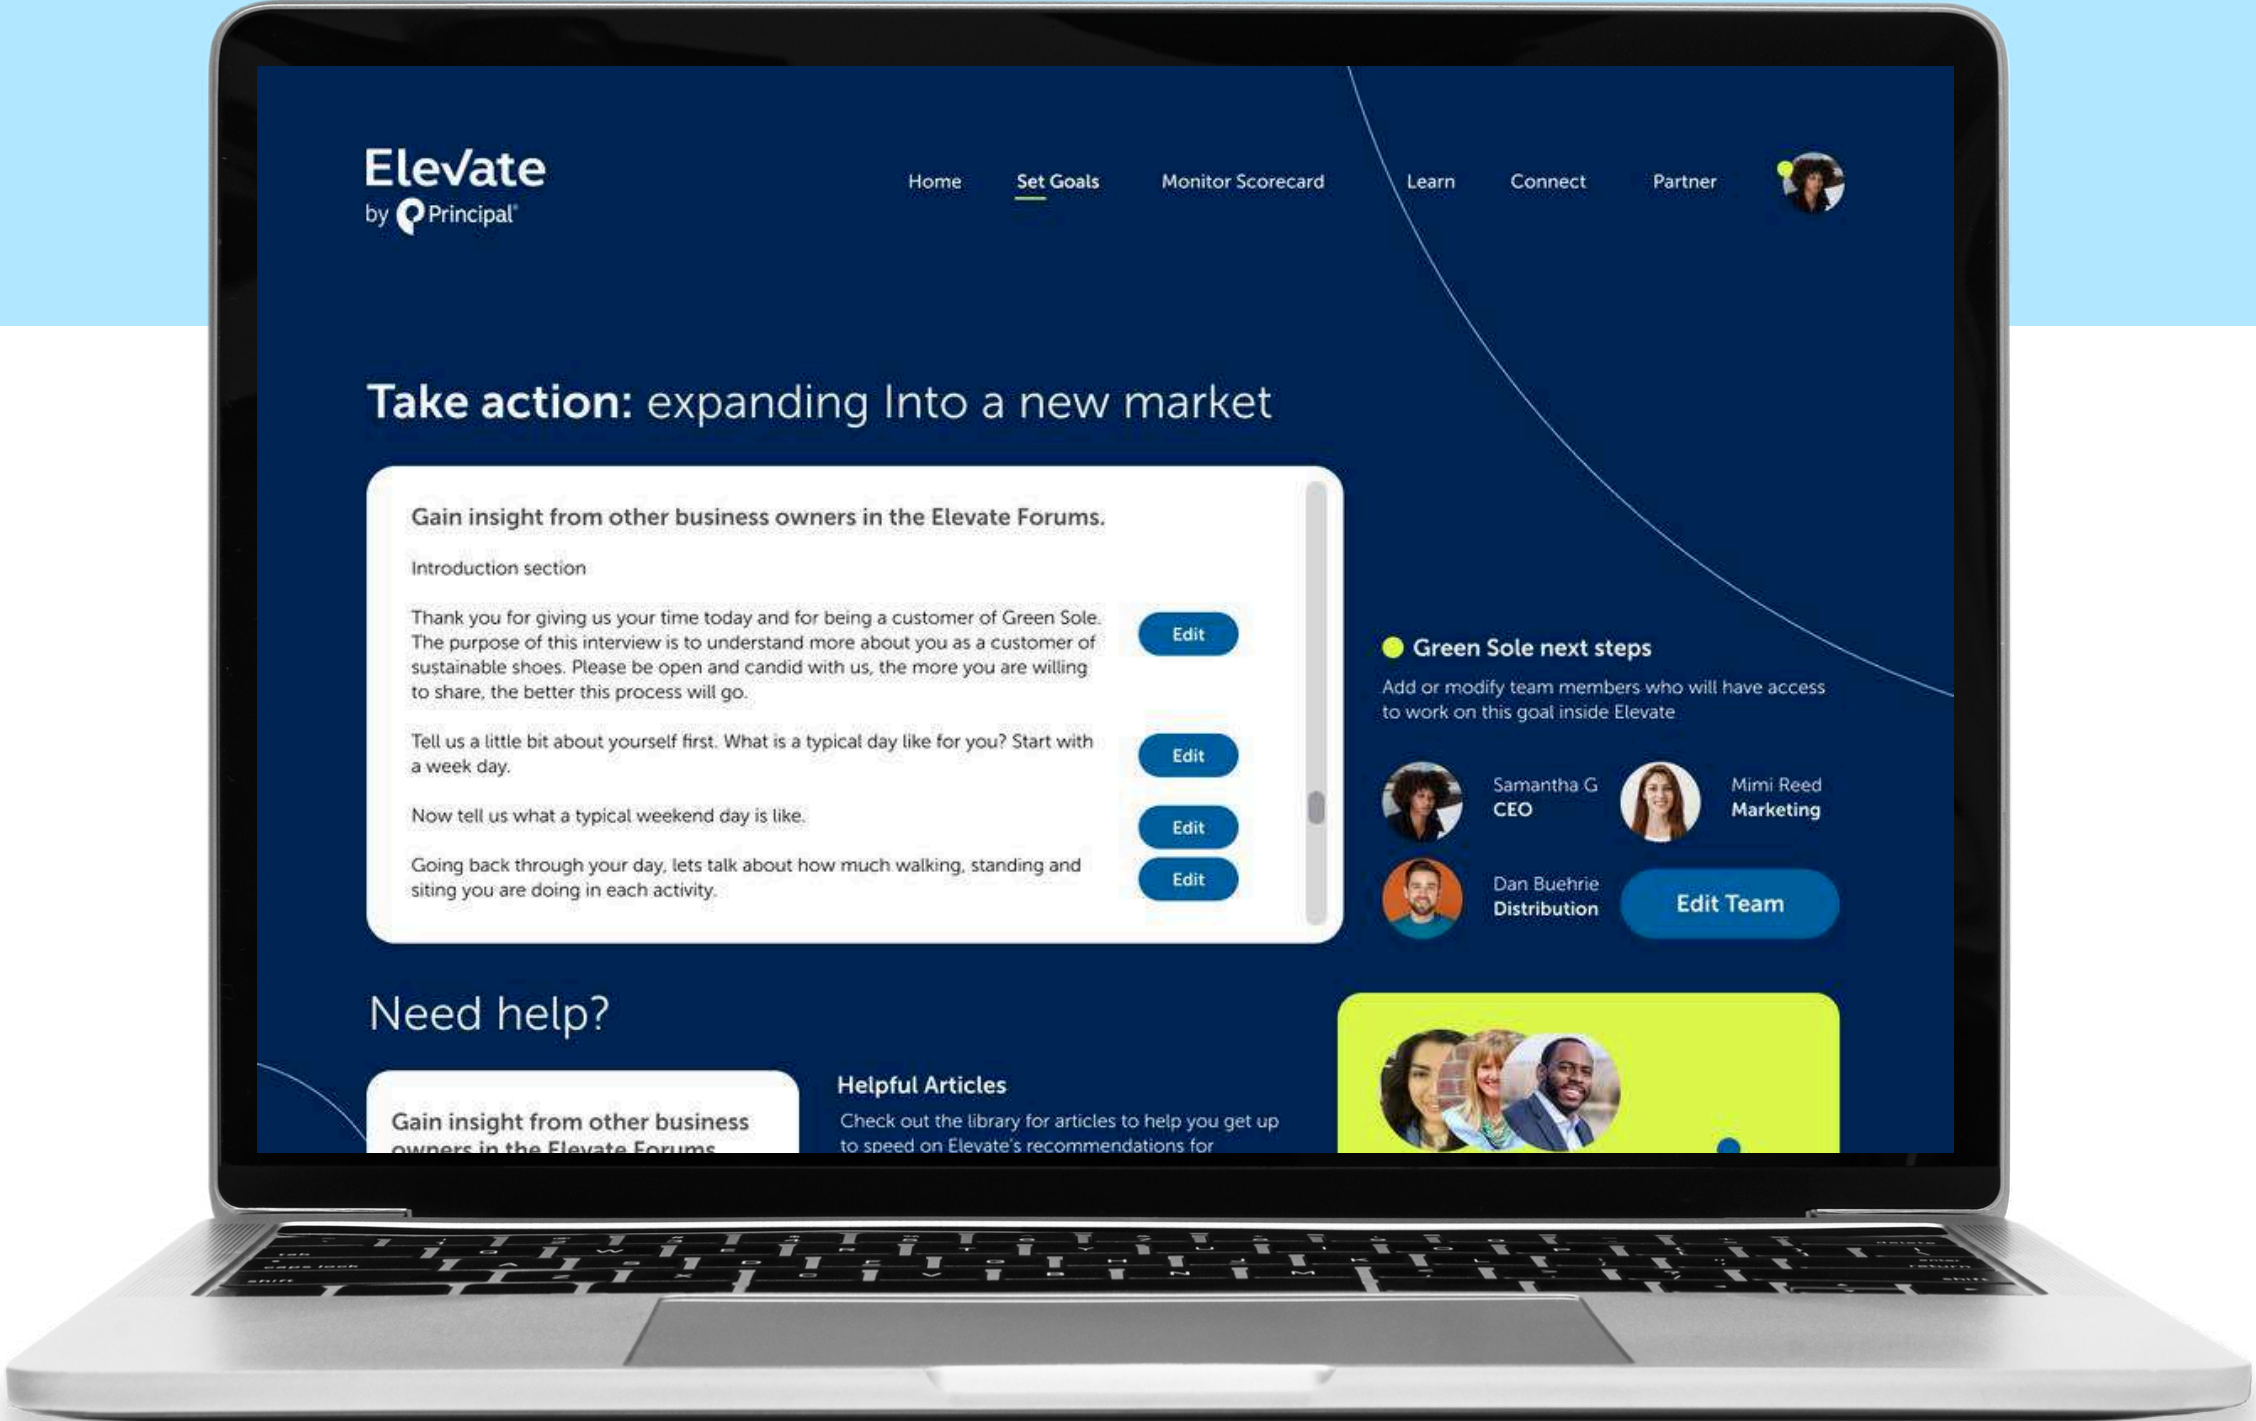

Technology continues to progress, so it's important to be proactive and focus on

Ally Law

We work together

to help clients grow, connect, and move beyond jurisdictions, economies, languages and industries.

Why Ally Law

There are more than 300 legal networks. Here's how we're different.

01 High quality, responsive service

We take your satisfaction seriously and use systems and standards to back that up. Ally Law firms are subject to a strict selection process and must adhere to rigorous client service standards. We then ask firms and clients to provide a written assessment of the services received. As a network of independent firms, this works to your advantage. Ally Law can remove any firm that fails to meet our service standards or receives poor evaluations.

02 Local rates provide better value

Each Ally Law firm independently operates in its local location. We believe this decentralized structure offers better value for you. We are also open to alternative fee structures or provide greater predictability.

Member Recognition

The stature of our member firms is the cornerstone of Ally Law's cost-effective, coordinated legal services model.
